LEGISLATURE OPENS MONDAY

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

FOR the last several days there has been a noticeable trickle of aged and timorous callers at my office to inquire what news we had of "the $200-a-month old-age pension." I think, as do you, that any man who goes around the country deliberately building up in the hearts of kindly people impossible expectations is the worst snake in our public life.

Gold Decision by Supreme Court to Govern All Debts

Nine Justices to Pass on Validity of Devaluation Law

$1,000 OR $1,690?

Adverse Decision Would Raise Bond Value in Currency Terms

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A $3,000,000,000 increase in private and public debts and the fate of the New Deal's monetary program hung Friday night upon a decision of the nine members of the United States Supreme Court.

Although government lawyers expressed confidence of the outcome, the markets declined to share their optimism. Gains broke and non-ferrous metals were off, while government bonds whose value would be increased by an adverse decision were strong.

In short, the court was called upon to decide whether a $1,000 gold bond, whether of the government or private corporation, should be worth $1,690 in the new devaluated currency, or be redeemable at its face value in the present dollars. There are $100,000,000,000 in such bonds outstanding.

Much Speculation
There was much unofficial speculation in Washington as to what the administration would do if the court should decide against it. Some held the Treasury would continue paying face value, dollar for dollar in the new currency, until ordered to make a change by congress. Others suggested that in the 25 days between announcement of a decision and rejection or approval of a plea to reconsider, the personnel of the court might be increased from nine to 11 through special action by congress.

Another suggestion was that the president might proclaim an emergency and take control over the currency as he did in the financial panic of his first year in office.

President Silent
Neither President Roosevelt, when asked at his press conference, nor Treasury officials would comment upon the possibility of an adverse ruling or the course the government would follow.

Attorney General Cummings, in presenting the government's case before the Supreme Court, said that "choos" would follow an adverse decision. Primarily, the question left before the court after arguments closed was whether congress acted within its rights in abrogating the clause found in most bonds and contracts, predating June, 1933, guaranteeing payment in gold or in amount of currency representing the sum of gold stipulated.

The congressional action was intended to enforce governmental seizure of all monetary gold stocks, and reduction of the gold dollar a year ago from 25 4-5 grains to 15 5-21 grains. In the new currency, 25 4-5 grains of gold are worth $1.69.

Old Age Pensions of $40 Per Month Is Congress Rumor

Closely Guarded, Actual Recommendation Can't Be Confirmed

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Although President Roosevelt will lay a broad general program for social security before congress next week, congressional leaders understood Saturday that he would place upon them the responsibility of drafting the detailed legislation.

Under this procedure it will be left to congress to decide for instance whether the payroll tax to finance an unemployment insurance bill will be 3 or 5 per cent, and whether the fund will be financed entirely by employers or partly by employees.

The recommendations for old-age pensions are being closely guarded. Speculation has centered on monthly pensions of $40, but there is no reliable confirmation of this figure.

Yugoslavia Forbids Stealing of Brides

It's an Old Custom, But Government Is Going to Stop It

SKOPLJE, Yugoslavia.—(AP)—The Yugoslav government Friday outlawed bride stealing. In an effort to halt the practice, the authorities approved plans for exchange of marriageable girls between South Serbia and Herzegovina.

A dearth of marriageable women in Southern Serbia previously had caused professional "bride snatchers," white slave traders and even parents to sell eligible girls at such high prices that the newlyweds often faced many years' economic bondage.

In Herzegovina, on the other hand, husbands are scarce, available brides too numerous. Marriageable girls of 10 go at prices less than those for goats or cows.

The government, therefore, worked out plans for disposing of Herzegovina's surplus single women in Southern Serbia where, owing to the excess of men, no girl over 16 goes long unwooed or unwed.

Thousands of girls, it was stated Friday, are being either sold or traded. The surplus would be bridegrooms in South Serbia are delighted to pay $25 to $50 for brides from Herzegovina, instead of the normal prices in their district of $500 to $2,500.

For their part, the prospective brides gladly waive dowry rights, asking only to be assured of shelter and enough food. In Herzegovina food is scarce; in South Serbia even the poorest never go hungry.

Amusing But Obsolete Laws of Old Days Are to Be Repealed

Walter L. Pope to Ask Legislature to Scrape Off Ridiculous Barnacles From Ancient Hull of Ship of State

BY HENRY N. DORRIS
Associated Press Staff Writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(AP)—If Attorney General Walter L. Pope has his way, the law requiring freshmen at the University of Arkansas to two hours a day for pay of not more than 10 cents an hour, will be repealed along with nearly 100 sections of the state's digest which have become "obsolete, archaic and ineffective."

Through a repeal measure he has prepared, Pope intends to send the Arkansas law digest into legislative drydock Monday to scrape off the legal barnacles which have accumulated during the 100 years of the state's history.

Bloodhounds, Egad!
For instance, Pope cites as one of the "archaic" statutes that which requires the sheriff of each county to keep on hand a pack of bloodhounds, under penalty of $500 fine, removal from office, or indictment. This law rates as one of the state's legal antiquities, having been enacted back in the first legislature in 1838.

The stern statutory requirement that "male students below sophomores" at the university labor on the college farm or workshops for two hours a day is of more recent vintage—the product of 1887. It sets a maximum of pay of 10 cents an hour, with a minimum of three cents.

It's now against the law to sell or weigh cotton at night. One section sets forth this prohibition, and one following tempers it by providing that any "person selling the article (cotton) who may be able to prove by a competent witness that he is the right owner of the article shall not be held guilty."

The former had his protector in the legislative halls of 100 years ago. As witness is the statute providing a heavy penalty for the "owner of any vessel, raft or boat" taking cordwood off the farms. In those days, steamboats plying the Mississippi, White, Arkansas, Ouachita and other rivers burned cordwood for fuel.

Early Livestock Law
In early stockhold, persons driving their herds of cattle, sheep, horses or mules across the state were required to obtain from a county clerk a brand with which to mark his animals. If an unbranded one strayed, it became the property of the finder unless claimed within ten days. It is still the law, too, but like that forbidding auctioneering except by license, no one has paid much attention to it.

If Pope's bill passes, liquor may once more be sold to the Indians. At present, a 30-year-old statute forbids it. It also will no longer be unlawful to "tear down turnpike toll gates" or "cut timber within five miles of Little Rock," and persons who nurse, or help prevent the spread of smallpox, will be unable to lawfully claim a reward from a county for their services.

Revolutionary war soldiers, incidentally, will no longer be exempt from arrest on a civil process, if Pope's bill passes.

And, as a climax, he proposes to make the sale of cigarettes legal. For 12 years, Arkansas has exacted a heavy tax on cigarettes, which has yielded millions of dollars, but it is the attorney general to find out that the sale of the fags still is unlawful.

7th Annual Free Cooking School to Open Here Monday

Miss Jessie Hogue to Conduct This Year's Show at Saenger

ATTENDANCE GROWS
Star's Annual School Now Draws 4,000 During 4-Day Session

The Star's seventh annual Free Cooking School will open at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, January 15, at the Saenger theater, with Miss Jessie Hogue as this year's instructor.

As the school will run four afternoons, through Friday, January 18, Manager Swanke of the Saenger has announced that there will be no screen matinees on Tuesday and Thursday. Picture matinees will be resumed the following Tuesday, January 22.

Launched by The Star the spring of 1929, the Free Cooking School has brought consistently fine culinary lectures to Hope, resulting in constantly increasing attendance, an average of 4,000 women attending the Saenger during the four-day session. Usually more than half the attendance is drawn from outside the city.

Miss Hogue, instructor, is a native of the city. In fact, that is the school, as may be judged from its title will feature the Happy Kitchen, which may be any kitchen in that kitchen is conducted in the manner Miss Hogue advises. She will speak with experience and knowledge, not untold theory.

There are books, bulletins and articles on the subject of cooking," says Miss Hogue, "so many in fact that one is almost bewildered by the literally thousands of rules and suggestions. It is no easy task, even for one who has had years of experience in such matters, to search out the facts, to sift out the useful from the merely novel."

New Ideas
In cooking, as in other arts, according to Miss Hogue, there is a constantly flowing stream of new ideas, coming from many sources, and it is the duty of those who devote their lives, their careers to home economics, to test and prove the practicability of such suggestions, throwing out the bad ones, and simplifying and making workable the more worthy ones.

During the progress of the Happy Kitchen Cooking School Miss Hogue will bring to housewives of this city only those proved and workable recipes which experience and intelligence would choose for varying conditions. She will show in the most simple and understanding manner how to prepare many delightful dishes, how to balance menus and how to serve just the proper thing for each occasion.

Every session of the Happy Kitchen Cooking School will be worthy of your close attention. And please remember—there is no admission charge and no obligation.

Graves Pledged to Retain City Plant
Mayorality Candidate Makes Position Plain on Municipal Plant

Albert Graves, candidate for mayor, added to his original political announcement the following statement Saturday:

"Some of my friends have suggested that I state my position as to the sale of the water and light plant. This seems wholly unnecessary, as this plant belongs to the people of the city and cannot be sold without their consent, and, furthermore, the sentiment is overwhelmingly against the sale or lease of the plant and there is no movement on foot to sell or lease the same.

However, I am glad to state my position on this question. I am very much opposed to the sale or lease of our water and light plant, and if I am elected mayor, and I confidently believe I will be, I shall oppose and fight and vote against any movement to sell or lease or otherwise dispose of our water and light plant; and you may rest assured that the plant will never be sold, leased or disposed of while I am mayor."

"Double" for Hauptmann May Have Been at Lindbergh Home

New Jersey Man Said to Resemble Prisoner—Defense Claims Dead Isador Fisch Wrote Ransom Notes

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The New York Post said Saturday it had learned that a man bearing a striking resemblance to Bruno Richard Hauptmann will be a surprise witness for the defense in Hauptmann's trial.

The "double," the Post said, is Robert Scanlon, of Menlo Park, N. J., who said, according to the Post, that he was inspecting property near the Hopewell estate of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, and was in the woods surrounding the Lindbergh home and drove over the roads in that vicinity about the time of the kidnapping.

Scanlon, the Post said, drove a green sedan.

FLEMINGTON.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defense put its own handwriting experts to work on the Lindbergh ransom notes Saturday in an attempt to show they were written by the wealth-like Isador Fisch.

Taking advantage of the week-end recess in the trial, the defense attorneys also sought flaws in the evidence presented by the state that the notes were written by Hauptmann himself.

"We will prove that Fisch not only collected the ransom but also wrote the ransom notes," Edward J. Reilly, chief of defense counsel, said.

Kidnap Threat on Banker Is Made
Bostonian's Six-Year-Old Son Subject of Threatening Letters

NEWTON, Mass.—(AP)—A threat to kidnap the 6-year-old son of Thomas P. Beal, president of the Second National Bank of Boston, was revealed Saturday.

Demands for $25,000 and warnings that Thomas, Jr., would be destroyed unless immediate payment were made, were first received by the Beal family two months ago. A heavy guard was placed at the Beal home to protect the boy and his sister, Judith, 7.

Federal agents and postal authorities have been working on the case secretly. Police do not regard the demands as the work of a crank.

5 Are Convicted in Nevada Court
Mayor R. P. Hamby Presides During Illness of Judge Bush

PRESCOTT, Ark.—In the absence of Circuit Judge Dexter Bush, who is ill at his home at Texarkana, Mayor Randolph H. Hamby of Prescott was elected by the Prescott Bar association to preside at Friday's session of Circuit Court.

Joe Brown, 28, and James Broomfield, 30, were convicted of burglarizing Parker's gin and stealing cottonseed. They were sentenced to three years each.

Richard Brown, 45, negro, was convicted of stealing a watch and sentenced to a year. Malcolm Maloney, 35, negro, was convicted of stealing 20 chickens and sentenced to a year. Leo Jackson, negro, was convicted of burglarizing a store at Sutton and sentenced to three years.

Court was adjourned until Tuesday, when the civil docket will be tried.

Tennessee Urged to Vote Sales Tax
Governor McAlister Recognizes Demand for 2½ Millions

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—Enactment of a sales tax and legislation to enable the state and its political subdivisions to "take full advantage of the benefits" offered by the Tennessee Valley Authority were recommended Friday by Gov. Hill McAlister in his biennial message to the legislature.

He also urged ratification of the federal labor amendment to the federal constitution and the holding of an election this fall to decide whether a convention should be called to revise the state's 65-year-old constitution.

Opposition was expressed to a proposed referendum on the dry laws and to enactment of any bills to change the statutes prohibiting any beverage of stronger alcoholic content than 32 beer.

"Experience in such controversies long ago convinced me," the executive said, "that when they are presented every other question that makes for the benefit, the relief or the advancement of the people is obscured and lost sight of in the fierce arguments that this question always arouses."

It was with the "greatest reluctance" that Governor McAlister recommended a sales tax and he suggested that it remain in effect for not longer than two and a half years. He called attention to the federal government's demand that Tennessee provide $2,500,000 a year for relief and also to the condition of the general fund, despite a $6,000,000 annual expense reduction made by the legislature two years ago.

Schools and Poor Must Be Provided for by the State

Arkansas Has to Find Revenue as Federal Aid Leaves Off

MANY HAVE PLANS
Sales Tax and Levies Against Liquor and Racing Proposed

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—With most of the organization details already taken care of through caucuses, both houses of the Fifth General Assembly are ready to start at noon Monday upon a host of problems of which the most pressing were considered to be relief for unemployed, and the state's charitable institutions.

Even though the two organizations apparently had the employe problem well in hand through pre-session efficiency committees, the first 24 hours of the 60-day session probably will be required to effect a smooth working organization which will be turned loose on problems of government after Governor J. Marion Futrell delivers his biennial address at 2 p. m. Tuesday.

Thorn to Be Speaker
Meanwhile, the house is expected to name Rep. Harvey B. Thorn of Poinsett county, veteran legislator and friend of the schools and utility regulation, as speaker. Most of the 100 house members already have their names signed to pledges to vote for him.

In the senate, Lieut. Gov. Lee Cazor said that aside from the naming of committees, the upper branch was ready to start work.

Governor Futrell was understood to be ready to tell the legislature he desired speedy legislation to set up a system of administering aid to unemployed, who will be turned over to the state for care February 1 by the federal government.

Next in importance in the governor's mind is additional revenue to guarantee uninterrupted operation of the state hospital, the Arkansas Tuberculosis Sanatorium, and the McRae Tuberculosis Sanatorium for negroes at Alexander.

Where to get the revenue for both, Governor Futrell says, is a problem for the legislature to solve. He indicated he would not suggest the means, but as members gathered in the city, they indicated they were not without suggestions.

Liquor and Racing
Numbered among these suggested revenue producing measures were those to legalize and tax the sale of liquor, legalize and tax the pari-mutuels, and legalize and tax slot machines.

In the minds of some, the sales tax proposed in some quarters could furnish some of the $1,500,000 necessary for operation of charitable institutions during the next biennium.

The sales tax, however, was proposed by the State Board of Education and allied school groups as a means of obtaining about $3,500,000 a year they say will be necessary to put the public schools on their feet.

The board's program calls for state aid of 400 per cent teaching unit to guarantee six months terms throughout the state.

Plaquemine, La.—(AP)—Organization of the first branch chapter of the Square Deal Association of Louisiana which was thrown down the gauntlet to Senator Huey P. Long's dictatorship was completed here Friday night at a mass meeting.

Packing their courthouses beyond capacity, thousands of citizens heard speeches furiously denouncing Long, and perfected chapter organization with a full set of officers and an executive committee. The crowd cheered speakers who called Long, without his name, in conformity with a rule announced at the meeting, "a dictator, a moral and physical coward," and a "destroyer of constitutional government."

"We have been dishonored and laughed at by this polluted bunch of scoundrels," Peter Wilbert, Plaquemine lumberman said.

NEW ORLEANS.—(AP)—Cotton opened steadier than appeared to be warranted by lower Liverpool cables than due.

First trades were three points down to one point up with March at 12.40, or three points down, and July 12.58, one point up. March rallied a point after the start and May recovered two points to 12.57, making the price level near the end of the first half hour two down to one point up compared with the previous close.

Trading was moderately active. The stock market opened about steady.

New York
NEW YORK.—(AP)—Cotton futures opened steady, unchanged to three points decline with lower Liverpool cables and foreign selling partly offset by trade buying. January 12.39; March 12.49; May 12.55; July 12.57; October 12.44; December 12.50.

Radium Has Its Limits in Cure of Cancer

In Great Britain the Medical Research Council makes available each year an analysis of the uses of radium. When radium was first introduced by the Curies, it seemed likely that it eventually would become exceedingly important in treatment of cancer. Such expectations have been fulfilled. Radium has not, however, developed into a cure-all or a method of treatment for all sorts of diseases. Indeed, the limitations of its use even in cancer are beginning to be rather well defined.

The most recent report from the British investigators indicates that radium has certain uses in each form of cancer. A cure in a case of cancer is believed to be an instance in which the patient is alive and free from cancer at the end of five years after the treatment is given.

It must be remembered that persons with cancer are usually in their advanced years and that, therefore, their death rates from causes outside of cancer are high.

In cancer of the breast in women, the evidence indicates that the ideal treatment is surgical removal, followed by use of radium or X-rays or both, if required. In cancer of the tongue, the immediate application of radium seems to be helpful, but the ultimate results are not exceedingly good.

Unfortunately, the results of surgery of cancer of the tongue are also not so very good. Cancer of the glands associated with cancer of the tongue usually is treated by surgical removal with radium.

The most successful use of radium seems to be in the early stages of cancer of the female organs associated with childbirth. The results in such cases are good. In fact, radium seems to be helpful even in those cases in which operation is impossible.

In the meantime, further advances in use of radium in various forms of cancer depend on an increase of our knowledge as to the nature of the action of radium and of its particular effects on various types of growing cells in the human body.

Which Books Will Win 1934's Prizes?—Picking Pulitzer Selections Is an Amusing Game

Here's a nice New Year's game for book lovers. Look back at the 1934 books and try to pick likely Pulitzer Prize candidates. Pulitzer Prize committees being rather incalculable, you probably won't even come close; but it will give you a chance to name your favorites for the year.

Here are this reviewer's suggestions: Novels: "The Folks," Ruth Suckow's study of Iowa and the American middle class generally, is an odds-on choice, probably. Your reviewer, however, would like to offer MacKinlay Kantor's magnificent novel of Mary Ellen Chase's fine story of Maine, "Mary Peters"; or Harlan Hatcher's beautiful story of Kentucky pioneers, "Patterns of Wolfpen."

Poetry: "American Song" by Paul Poele, a robust if slightly immature chant of a revived American spirit; or perhaps, "The Westward Star," by Frank Ernest Hill, a well-sustained long narrative poem of considerable beauty.

Biography: "R. E. Lee," by Douglas Southall Freeman, which is everything that a biography of Lee ought to be (though the committee may want to wait for the final two volumes before deciding); "The Eve of Conflict," by George Fort Milton, a very scholarly biography of Stephen A. Douglas; "Bliss, Peacemaker," Col. Frederick Palmer's eye-opening account of the life of a great American soldier. Any of these three would be a very worthy choice.

History: Why not be a little unorthodox and pick "The Rubber Barons," by Matthew Josephson, or "Dynamite," by Louis Adamic—two

Dillinger Lawyer Dodges Accusation

Piquett Blames Dead Horse-Doctor for Harboring of Criminal

CHICAGO (AP)—Louis Piquett shifted the blame for harboring John Dillinger to a self-slain horse doctor and his own assistant in a recital of gangland secrets Friday.

The portly lawyer took the witness stand to defend himself against charges of concealing his notorious client and to deny he was the master mind who protected the outlaw from the law.

Piquett turned to the jury with a confident air. He readily admitted receiving $3,000 from Dillinger, and confessed he had advised with the fugitive within the shadows of a Chicago police station less than seven hours after he had escaped from the Crown Point (Ind.) jail.

However, Piquett said he had urged Dillinger to surrender. He pictured his aid, Arthur O'Leary, as the villain who pursued Dillinger to seek a hideout instead. He laid responsibility for the face lifting operations on Dillinger and Homer Von Meter, to James Probasco, amateur veterinarian who concealed the gunman in his West Side home and later leaped out of the 19th floor window of the Department of Justice offices.

One of his statements drew the fire from Judge William Murray of Crown Point. Piquett said he had discussed the murder of a policeman during a bank robbery in East Chicago, Ind., with the jurist during a chance meeting at the World's Fair. Judge Murray was quoted as saying: "If Dillinger is tried and the death verdict is returned, I would commute it to life because I don't think he killed Officer O'Malley."

The jurist replied from Crown Point: "If Piquett said I promised to commute the sentence in event he (Dillinger) was sentenced to the electric chair by the jury, he is a liar."

He offered to "refute his testimony" in court.

Asked if he believed he had broken the law, Piquett cried: "No." Prosecutor Weil inquired why he hadn't informed police of his client's hideout, but Judge Holly ruled: "It is not required of a lawyer to surrender his client or to inform law agencies." Piquett beamed on that point.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Nervousness mars beauty—Women Should Learn to Relax for Poise

The calm, relaxed woman generally is much more beautiful than one who is tense and who constantly makes nervous gestures with face and hands. Vivacity—a grand quality in anyone—is not synonymous with nervousness and it's quite possible to be alert and enthusiastic, yet not flustered.

For the sake of beauty and health, everyone should learn to relax. If you possibly can, get into a peaceful frame of mind while you're eating breakfast and try to maintain that serene outlook on life the rest of the day.

Naturally this isn't as easy as it sounds. We all have worries, of course, and to control ourselves so that our troubles won't put lines on our faces is something we have to learn to do. The best first step, probably, is to get a bit philosophical about daily duties and unavoidable minor troubles. It is possible to be efficient in your work, above reproach as far as social obligations are concerned, without getting into a state of nervous excitement ten times a day.

Remember that the right amount of sleep is about the best tonic in the world. Try to sleep eight hours each night and be sure it's the kind of sleep that makes you feel rested and in a cheerful mood in the morning.

If, day after day, you get up as tired as you were when you went to bed, start a sweeping investigation. Maybe the bed is uncomfortable. Perhaps the room is improperly ventilated. If conditions are right and still your insomnia persists, better see your doctor.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLV
DETECTIVE SHANNON came downstairs at midnight to find Peter Kendall waiting for him. Peter's hair was rumpled. His face showed strain and anxiety, but his eyes were eager.

"I got the call you left," he said.

"I'm sorry you made the trip. I could have told you over the telephone."

"The light died in Peter's eyes. 'I thought you had news for me.' 'We have, Mr. Kendall. We know where your wife is. That is, we know the neighborhood she is living in.'"

"Then why can't you find her?" "We expect to. The difficulty is, that the area is a nest of apartment buildings."

"Put every man you have on the job. Move heaven and earth."

Detective Shannon told Peter what had happened. A girl had phoned for a cab in a hurry from a home at Ingleside. She had told the driver she lived on Roland street, but instead of going home had left the cab at a drug store."

"What about the home in Ingleside? What did you find out there?" Peter's voice was hoarse with anxiety.

"We found that a man, his sister and two children live there. The neighbors said the entire family is spending the holidays out of town. The place was closed tight as wax. We're investigating the possibility that the driver went to another house. The homes in the section are similar. We'll make inquiries at this place as soon as the family returns. Meanwhile, we expect to find her."

"You're sure she is my wife?" "The driver is positive she is the same girl he drove away from your apartment that morning. He identified the picture of her. It was just a coincidence, Mr. Kendall, that this driver was sent to answer her call tonight."

"We'll work as fast as we can. It may be only a few days before we find her."

Peter drove home. The thought of Ann telephoning from somewhere in a fearful hurry worried him. She must have been in trouble of some kind. She was so little and helpless to be alone. She needed to be protected.

HE would see Sarah tomorrow. Perhaps Ann had communicated with her. He would make Sarah see that she must tell him if she had had news, whatever it might be.

Sarah telephoned Mac next day to say, "I can't meet you for lunch, honey. I'm having caviar with Peter Kendall instead of steak and onions with you."

"Two-timing me already?" Mac's voice came serious. "He probably thinks you are holding out on him about Ann."

"Poor fellow," Sarah said. "He must be in love with her."

"I knew that all along," Mac said.

Sarah told Mac that night that Peter Kendall was "really pathetic." Sarah said, "Some detective who has been working on the case has an idea he's found her. It's probably just another false clew."

"Peter's all broken up," Sarah went on thoughtfully. "He's so thin and worn, it breaks my heart. I told him I was pretty sure Valeria Bennett is at the bottom of the whole business. I told him about the day I was having lunch with Ann, and how Valeria went out of her way to tell Ann that Peter was decorating her home."

"How did he take that?" "He was terribly angry with Valeria. I think I asked him if he could think of anything he had done that Ann might have misunderstood. He couldn't think of a thing. Somebody's at the door."

"Nobody at all. Just Tony," Mac said, as he answered the ring.

Tony did not respond to Mac's railway. He sank into a chair. "I thought maybe you had a drink here."

"Haven't you better stay on the wagon until Saturday and get that rush job out you were telling me about?"

"This isn't the beginning of a tender, you fool," Tony said irritably. "I need a drink. This thing of Ann being swallowed up so many months has gotten on my nerves."

"Well, girls have hidden out in large cities before. I guess if Ann wanted to she could," Sarah said. "What's your specific worry, Tony? Have you heard anything?"

"I happened to be down at the police department this afternoon. A boy I know had been pulled in on a reckless driving charge. While I was there two policemen came in, talking about a girl—" "A girl?" Mac queried, and waited.

"A girl they pulled out of the river," Tony said soberly. "They didn't know who she was."

"That's foolish," Sarah said sharply, looking at Mac for reassurance, not daring to meet Tony's scared eyes. "Ann isn't that kind. You know she isn't, Tony."
